

Stand-Up Comedy Set Too Grown to Function, Too Young to Retire

[Opening Icebreaker]

Hey!

Hows everyone doing? Great? Wow. Must be nice.

I woke up this morning with a back pain and an existential crisis. At the same time. Likemultitasking.

Honestly, Ive reached that magical age where Im too grown to function, but too young to retire.

Basically, Im old enough to file taxes... and young enough to cry about it on Instagram.

Segment 1: The Almost Adult Starter Pack

You know youve hit this weird stage in life when your favorite part of the day... is cancelling plans.

In school, wed cry if no one invited us. Now?

"Hey bro, sorry I cant make it."

Me: *Yesss!* No worries man, take care, dont stress, REST is important.

My adulthood starter pack includes:

- 5 unread WhatsApp family group messages
- 3 empty milk packets in the fridge
- And a shampoo bottle with exactly 1 molecule left that I REFUSE to throw away.

Segment 2: Job Interviews AKA Professional Speed Dating

I recently gave a job interview where they asked me, Where do you see yourself in 5 years?

And I was like... "Bro, I dont even know what Im eating for dinner."

"Could be biryani. Could be breakdown."

The job market is wild. They want 3 years experience for an entry-level job.

Thats like asking a baby to run a marathon before they learn to crawl.

Hey kid, can you walk?

No?

Cool. Youre not qualified. NEXT.

Segment 3: Indian Parents & Their Olympic-Level Pressure

You ever notice how Indian parents treat life like a checklist?

Graduate?

Job?

Marriage?

*Relax aunty, I just bought detergent for the first time.*

My mom still introduces me to random people like,

This is my daughter... she has potential.

Like Im a startup that just hasnt received funding yet.

And if I dare to say Im tired

"Tired?! At your age? When I was your age I was married, had two kids and made roti with one hand while holding your uncle with the other!"

I get it maa, youre Batman.

Segment 4: Dating in the Era of Low Battery Anxiety

Dating these days is tough.

Tinder is just a game of "Which bio is lying the least?"

This one guy wrote:

I love traveling, dogs, and deep conversations.

Met him. He hated walking, was scared of dogs, and his deepest conversation was:

"So... u up?"

And ghosting has evolved.

Earlier, people would stop talking. Now they stop replying but still watch all your stories.

Like are you ignoring me or doing digital surveillance?

Segment 5: Tech Addiction Wi-Fi Is My Oxygen

I once lost Wi-Fi for 2 hours.

My brain rebooted. I made eye contact with my family. Spoke to them. We shared stories.

Turns out... they're nice people.

I have two SIM cards and 3 internet backups. Not for productivity just so I can Google:

"How to boil an egg"

While boiling the egg.

And let's be real. When the power goes out, the first thing I check isn't the fridge.

It's whether the router lights are blinking.

Segment 6: Health, Wealth, and the Occasional Quarter-Life Breakdown

You know you're grown when back pain has replaced birthdays.

Earlier it was Party hard!

Now its: Sit properly or suffer.

I went for a health checkup. Doctor said, You're low on Vitamin D, sleep, and joy.

I was like, So... my soul needs therapy, not my body.

Also, anyone else randomly Googling:

Can I retire at 30 with 500 and an old phone charger?

[Closing Punchline / Callback]

So here we are this in-between generation.

Too broke to invest, too tired to hustle, too old to party, too young for peace.

Were just... buffering.

Waiting for adulthood to load.

Wi-Fi is full, but life? Still Connecting...

Thank you! You've been amazing please remember:

If you cancel plans this weekend, you're not lazy.

You're just... responsibly grown.
